Reflection: Do you see a relationship between your top values and your top interest areas? Here are two examples:

1. My top three values are dignity, equality, and opportunity, and my top three issue areas are education, economic justice, and youth development. I believe that the opportunity for a good education, particularly for young people who are shut out of their full potential early on because of poor schools, is vital to dignity, equality, and, finally, economic justice for everyone.
2. My top three values are community, justice, and respect, and my top three issue areas are seniors, poverty, and homelessness and housing. The relationship I see is that in order for everyone to live in a just community, all seniors must have enough financial support, including good housing, to lead their lives with respect.

Write down the relationships you see among your own values and interests:

my top 3 values are compassion, integrity, and self-respect.
 my top 3 issue areas are education, girls, literacy. the relationship i see is that girls need an education to become literate and those teaching need compassion to teach those girls integrity and self-respect.
